Get more and save more with an ENERGY STAR® certified heat pump water heater

Behind heating and cooling, water heating is likely your home's second largest energy expense. A properly installed and maintained heat pump water heater can significantly reduce your energy use and help you save on your long-term energy costs.

An ENERGY STAR certified heat pump water heater can save the average family of four up to $550 a year—or nearly $5,600 over the life of the unit—on energy costs compared to a standard electric water heater.* Larger families that use more hot water could save even more. Plus, these models typically have 10-year warranties.
